- 3. General Studies School Procedure: A high school diploma is the basic qualification for employment and advancing a career. The General Studies diploma program makes earning a high school diploma an attainable goal for students who want to enter a community or technical college, the job market, or the military after graduation, but who have struggled in meeting their four-year graduation plan. The program is only open to seniors who still owe credits past their date of intended graduation.

In this program, the student's curriculum consists of fundamental courses that are taught at a basic high school level. Students may earn an accredited high school diploma without being required to take any advanced math, science, foreign language or elective courses beyond California's minimum course requirements for a high school diploma.

- 4. Graduation requirements: Students who enroll in the General Studies Diploma Program must earn a total of 110 credits in the specified content areas listed in the California State minimum requirements with a "D" grade or better in each course in order to graduate.
