Curriculum Implementation

Dear Preschool Class, this week our focus was learning about earthquakes & volcanoes. The children did a science experiment in which they created a volcanic eruption. They mixed a liquid (vinegar) & a solid (baking soda) to make pretend lava. In this activity, they used their senses to experience, smelling the vinegar, touching the soft powdery baking soda, and watching the reaction the two created. They also mixed red and yellow paint to make orange lava. We practiced Earthquake safety as well. The children built houses with blocks and shook them to simulate an earthquake. We yelled "Earthquake!" & we went under the tables, covering the back of our heads & necks. Their favorite outdoor activity was playing The Floor is Lava and making volcanic lava mixtures.
